EX-HUSBAND OF MRS. GETTIGAN WITNESS AT MURDER TRIAL

AGGRESSIVE GROGGER LOYAL WIFE OF MAN ACCUSED OF MURDER WEST END GANG EMPLOYED GIRL AS REGOY DENIES MORSE ONE OF 5,000 BOUND TO GIRL CLINGS TO ROMANCE

Life Calm at New Turn of Prosecution of Robert Man

John Papadopoulos of Malone, first husband of Mrs. Myrtle Gettigan, appeared in Suffolk Superior Court today to testify for the State against her present husband, J. Thomas Gettigan, who is on trial charged with murder of his ex-wife, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cook, and conspiracy to murder his wife, the late Clinton W. Richardson.

Mrs. Gettigan, sitting at her feet away from the defendant, seemed unimpressed when the State witness walked in like a ghost across her dead husband's seat.

Gettigan would not discuss the nature of his testimony. Mrs. Gettigan divorced him years ago, some time before she married her present husband, former live-in grogger, Papadopoulos, a being tried before Justice Hugh A. Dubouche and a jury, instant District Attorney Daniel J. Love outlined for the State that he would prove beyond doubt that Gettigan murdered his wife, as he let her out of the way and tried to hire thugs to slay his wife as he might inherit Richardson's $50,000 fortune.

Dr. Michele Negro of Roxbury, who attended Mrs. Cook in her last illness, in 1921, was the first witness described as a witness.

Dr. Negro said he visited Mrs. Cook on an emergency call as she lay before her death in June, 1921, at her home, 100 West End street. She was unconscious. Her eyes were moving tremulously as she was moving. There were several people in the room. He saw her face and heard her voice. He was called by Mrs. Richardson.

Attorney Roscoe Walsworth, counsel for Gettigan, brought out in examination that Dr. Negro's opinion Mrs. Cook died of peritonitis. The physician at the hospital had prescribed approximately one-fourteenth of a grain of strychnine for the victim.

Miss Agnes Riley of No. 85 Beach street, who lived with Mrs. Cook, said Mrs. Cook, during the last few days of her life, was moving from room to room, and she could hear her husband's voice. She also heard conversations at the door.

Miss Riley described scenes in Mrs. Cook's room from June 13 to June 15, 1921, Mrs. Cook dying on the last day.

WARD STRANGE NOISE. On June 12 I went to bed rather late, said the witness. "I saw a light in Mrs. Cook's room and a peculiar noise. I heard the woman groaning. The next morning I saw her in bed. She appeared very sick. She was in bed all day. Mrs. Cook and Mrs. Gettigan were in the room. I visited her again on Tuesday. She was weaker and delirious."

She visited Mrs. Cook several times during the week. Mrs. Cook was very feeble. On Wednesday night, Mrs. Cook was talking. On Thursday Mrs. Riley remained at the bedside until after midnight. She left at 5 o'clock.

Liners Competing for Fastest Ship Honors

New York, May 23.—Steamship circles are watching with interest the contest for fastest ship honors which is apparently now on between the new White Star liner Majestic and the world speed record-holder, the Mauretania, which left New York May 16, completed her voyage to Cherbourg in 5 days, 12 hours and 31 minutes.

The Majestic, which sailed on her first return voyage Saturday, was reported by wireless as having made the twenty-four hours from New York Sunday at an average speed of 24.50 knots an hour.

Monday afternoon, June 13, 1921, that her neighbor was dead. Gettigan sat with his hands over his face, interested, but not cast down. His wife, who was in court yesterday, did not appear for the opening of court.

Mr. Gettigan told the Boston American in the only interview he has granted since his arrest and indictment, that he was innocent and confident of acquittal. He praised his wife, devoted wife, Myrtle, who has labored incessantly to uncover evidence that will restore her husband to her.

Forty-two years old, short and rather stout, dark-haired, and with eyes that seem to glare through one, Mr. Gettigan declared he was in good spirits and unafraid of the outcome.

"If I am guilty of that horrible crime, I hope and pray to God that I will prove me not," he said innocently, and I know I am, all I want is justice. And I know I'm going to get it," he said.

GANG SOUGHT IN WARD MYSTERY

session of the three men who collected $30,000 "hush money" according to Ward's confession, and demanded an additional $75,000, has been allowed to become public.

The beautiful young wife of the young millionaire, who surrendered and was admitted to bail on a $100,000 charge yesterday, again went to her side today.

She admitted she had learned "only very lately" of the entanglements in which her husband's young husband was involved, but she insisted to decline harboring any doubts regarding his actions.

"I am with my husband," she said for him. I have the utmost confidence in him.

Western county officials declare they are fully convinced by the story which Ward told of the killing and of the facts which led up to it. Their preliminary inquiries, they state, led to the belief that the "Charley Ross" who was chief of the blackmailers, according to Ward, is a well-known race-track follower, whose methods of operation have been under suspicion here.

WEST END GANG EMPLOYED GIRL AS REGOY

A pretty girl was used as a decoy to lure Thomas Conroy, West End foulard, into the clutches of the gang which attacked and wounded him in the West End, according to the police today.

Eight men who were arrested in a house on Continental avenue in Revere charged with the assault are being questioned concerning the case.

Conroy's story is understood to be that the gangsters first went to his home in Springfield and made inquiries for him. Learning he was in a West End restaurant they went there and sent the girl in to seek a quarrel with Conroy.

The gangster was taken in and followed the girl to Green and Chambers streets trying to explain.

On reaching the corner, and in the shadow of a church, Conroy discovered an out-of-control of young men and started away as they opened fire on him.

LEFT HOSPITAL. He was wounded once, and fell back into the arms of a policeman who came running.

As he did he also stated: "It's Boston Kitty. I'll get him yet."

Conroy's injury did not prove serious and he insisted on leaving the Haymarket Hotel Hospital and going home.

When he reached his home in Revere was raided by police, the first man arrested was "Boston Kitty," a girl known by his real name as Louis Glass.

The other three were Jacob Rubin, Sam Levine, Mack Stein, Israel Stein, Bernard Rubin, John Harris and Edward M. Lewis.

IN NUMEROUS ROLES. In Municipal Court Glass was charged with assault with intent to kill and also with possessing narcotics. The other seven were charged with the assault and with being present where narcotics were found.

Conroy and Glass both have police records, but "Kitty" hasn't been in trouble for years.

DENIES MORSE ONE OF 5,000 BOUND TO GIRL CLINGS TO ROMANCE

By International News Service. New York, May 23.—That an unscrupulous dealer, the Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty, "ever received one penny" of compensation for his efforts in behalf of getting Charles W. Morse released from Federal prison was made today by Colonel Thomas R. Feder, Georgia attorney, the Attorney-General's partner in the famous proceedings.

Feder admitted that he (Feder) received a retainer of $5,000 and $100 expense money from Morse, "but this was paid," he said, "long before 11. M. Daugherty had any knowledge of or connection with the case."

Colonel Feder declared he made several unsuccessful attempts to persuade the Attorney-General to accept some compensation in the Morse case, chiefly stocks in one of Morse's enterprises, but each time the Attorney-General refused to accept it.

Neither did Daugherty sign the contract of August 4, read in the Senate by Senator Cawley, Democratic Arkansas, under which Morse agreed to pay $25,000 to Feder and Daugherty for procuring his release, Feder said.

MORSE REFUSED STOCKS. "I sent a duplicate copy of the contract to Daugherty with a request that he sign it," Feder said. "But so far as I know he never could be induced to sign it."

Feder said his files showed that he came to New York on April 12, 1913, at Daugherty's request for a conference with Morse over the litigation of Morse by the Metropolitan Steamship Company, one of Morse's enterprises.

"The day after the conference," Feder said, "I called at the office of Charles W. Morse and demanded payment in my own behalf of the $25,000 contingent fee. Morse said he did not intend to pay me, but offered me a block of stock in the Metropolitan Steamship Company, which I accepted. I was assured the stock was valuable and dividends were being paid, but none were paid."

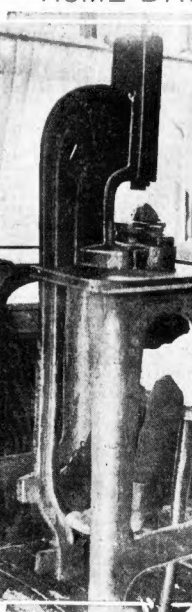

"Some time later, realizing the stock was useless, I again called on Morse and demanded that he take back the stock and pay my fee. He admitted the stock I held was worthless and turned over to me 2,500 shares of stock that had a par value of $10 a share. From this stock I secured some dividends, but he also declined stock and is now worthless."

CHARGES CONSPIRACY. "Several times I offered one-half of what I secured to Daugherty, and each time he refused to accept it."

"I make this assertion today that this groundless assault on the honor of Mr. Daugherty was made by a deliberate conspiracy by people who have plundered the Government to discredit him."

Feder today set forth his position, contending that the Attorney-General was the victim of a conspiracy to discredit him. He said that Daugherty had ever been a Republican, of Indiana, who was the first to denounce Morse, and that Daugherty had ever been a Republican, of Indiana, who was the first to denounce Morse, and that Daugherty had ever been a Republican, of Indiana, who was the first to denounce Morse.

Four Cabinet Men Linked in Morse Case By International News Service. Washington, May 23.—Four cabinet officers from three successive administrations were linked today with the Morse case, which has aroused political Washington to never before.

A PRETTY COMPLEXION

If the complexion is clear, soft and smooth, free from all skin discolorations such as freckles, tan and blemishes, you possess the most valuable asset of beauty. You should therefore, strive to retain this charm by giving the skin daily attention and care.

Beauty Bleach has been used successfully by those who wish to keep their skin in perfect condition. This skin cream's skin beautifier will not injure the most delicate skin texture nor will it grow hair. At all drug counters 50c the jar.

Clip and mail this to Plough, Menthmore, Inc., for complimentary Beauty and Dress Readings.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful that you wash it with.

Most shampoos and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This drives the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Shuffled coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely free from alkali) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mather's coconut oil shampoo in six drops of water, then wash your hair with your fingers. It will make an abundance of foam, and cleans the scalp and the hair and scalp thoroughly. The foam rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair is left soft, shiny, and free from itching, dry, and easy to manage.

You can get Mather's coconut oil shampoo at any drug store, or you can write to Mather's, 100 N. 1st St., New York, N. Y., for a free sample of this shampoo, and a full size bottle for $1.00.

BILL MAY GIVE NIFTY CONTEST NEW TRIAL TO ROLLINS IS OPEN TO EVERYBODY

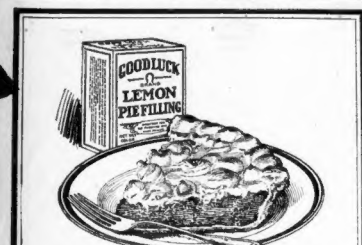

The bill to extend the time within which a motion for a new trial may be filed in capital cases was passed by a large majority in the House. This means that George Rollins, convicted and sentenced to death for the murder of the manager of a chain store grocery, may be allowed a new trial if fresh evidence were found.

The bill was endorsed by Chief Justice Rugg and received the support of prominent judges and members of the bar.

It is reported that a man at present serving a sentence in the Pennsylvania Eastern State Penitentiary at Philadelphia, has confessed that Rollins is innocent of the crime for which he has been sentenced to death. The murder was committed more than five years ago and Rollins was sentenced in 1915.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON BOSTON SOCIETY Junior League Active at Numerous Charity Affairs

CERTAINLY have the "dobbies" done their share in bringing the year to such a successful close for the Junior League.

Few indeed were the charity functions where one did not find a group of buds on hand to help in any way directed. Sometimes they served as ushers, sometimes as actresses, sometimes as flower girls, as waitresses, as committee members, or as salesgirls—all according to the nature of the affair.

Then there was the volunteer work to which they devoted not a small portion of their time. For at the League's closing meeting of the year, held last week, Miss Ruth Graves, chairman of the general work committee, reported that there were 175 members doing regular work on an average of three or four days a week, the greater portion of these being debutantes. To Miss Ethel Cummings, the debate chairman, and daughter of the Charles K. Cummings, goes the credit of directing a great deal of the volunteer work among the "just-out" contingent.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Francis C. Gray; vice-president, Miss Isabelle Mumford; secretary, Miss Margaret Winslow; treasurer, Miss Muriel Saltonstall.

Mrs. Gray, the president, read the first report of this year's work, in which was emphasized the success of the clubrooms under the management of Miss Eleanor Hunnewell and also the value of the new course for provisional members, of which Miss Isabelle Mumford has had charge. There were ninety-five provisional members of the league this year. During their course they were given various hospital, settlement, homes, the work of district nursing and of the baby hygiene, thereby giving them a better chance to choose the branch of service which they preferred to take up when admitted to active membership.

The clubrooms are to be closed from now until early in the Fall, although committees and members will continue to do a good deal of volunteer work throughout the hot months.

NEWS comes from Paris that Mr. and Mrs. Arnold W. Hunnewell (Mary C. Amory) of Boston have arrived at the French capital, where they are stopping at the Hotel Crillon. The young couple were married on March 16 at Trinity Church, the ceremony bringing out a choice coterie of the distinguished connections of the bride and groom. Miss Margot Amory was her sister's only attendant, the wedding arrangements being very simple, owing to mourning in the Hunnewell family.

The wedding plans of the young people followed fast upon the heels of the announcement of their betrothal. Both Mr. Hunnewell and his bride are orphans. Mr. Hunnewell is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hunnewell of Commonwealth avenue and a d. Wellesley. His bride is the oldest daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Robert Amory of Beacon street.

Mr. and Mrs. Hunnewell sailed abroad on their wedding journey immediately after their marriage, and have been spending a good bit of their time touring Switzerland.

APPROPOS of wedding journeys, jaunts across the "big pond" seem to be much in favor just now for those who have taken for themselves a life helpmate.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd B. Sanderson, Jr. (Rosanna Finkel) have just sailed for Europe following their marriage last week in April at Christ Church, Cambridge. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd B. Sanderson, Jr. are still abroad, having departed from their shores shortly after their wedding, solemnized on February 25 at Emmanuel Church.

Among the bridal couples of last Fall, several whose Europe as their destination, some continue on from there to travel in the Orient. The Bob Herricks (Theima Hall) returned not long ago from their wedding journey spent in the Far East, as did the Robert B. Choates (Katherine Crosby) whose marriage was one of the smartest nuptial events along the North Shore last season.

With several of the couples whose marriage takes place next month, planning trips abroad, Europe promises to retain its popularity.

MYSTERY IN HARDING'S SNUB TO WOMEN

Washington, May 23.—Mystery still veils the reason why President Harding failed to send an dedication ceremony Sunday of the new head, quarters of the National Woman's Party. Mrs. John O. Beattie, party leader, admits she knows, but like the day in the song, "won't tell."

COUNCIL AGAIN BLOCKS NORTH END PARK

The City Council has again turned down Mayor Curley's order asking for $70,000 to purchase the property of the Congregation Beth Israel Synagogue, Baldwin place, North End, for a playground. The price asked is $250,000, the assessed value.

President Brickley and Councilor James T. Moriarty were both in opposition to the passage of the order on the grounds that it did not seem appropriate to spend money on a playground in that part of the city which will not remain a residential section, as many of the people are moving into suburban Boston.

Miss Elizabeth Herlihy, secretary of the City Planning Board, and former City Councilor Walter L. Collins both spoke in favor of the project, pointing out to the Council the need of a playground in this congested district.

The council passed the order after many weeks of delay transferring land in the vicinity of Marine Park to the State. Mayor Curley plans to have the Dollar Lumber Company of Boston, purchase a large tract of land adjoining the Strandway for a lumber base. The council held out a long time fearing that obvious business might gain a foothold and spoil the beautiful stretch of land and waterfront in that section.

Mayor Curley, after asking that the city sell a tract of land in West Roxbury, near the Dedman line to the Boston Elevated for a bus parking area, was one for the sale of the wooden buildings at the corner of River and Winthrop streets, Hyde Park and the release of city land on Snow Hill and Sheafe streets, North End. The plan to be paid on the properties not to be less than $250,000.

The Mayor's order asking that $100,000 be appropriated for the installation of a fuel oil burning equipment for City Hall stoves and a like amount for the reconstruction and installation of two motor ambulances at the City hospital, were passed without comment.

AMERICAN'S MASS MEETING BRINGS 5-CENT GOAL NEARER

MISS FREDA NEILSON OF WINCHESTER, a passenger, and Charles Carroll, motorman, jumped to safety from a one-man trolley car a moment before it was ploughed to matchwood by a Boston & Maine express train at Baldwin's Crossing, near North Woburn. The trolley became stalled on track.

"THE GREATEST GOOD FOR THE GREATEST NUMBER OF CITIZENS DEMANDS THE RESTORATION OF THE FIVE-CENT CARFARE." This was the keynote of Lieut.-Gov. Fuller's speech at the Boston American's enthusiastic mass meeting on Boston Common, and it epitomized the tremendous purpose of the gathering. This panorama of Elevated patrons wildly cheered the American's stand. Inset at left shows Mr. Fuller signing one of the hundreds of petitions circulated among the crowd. At right is Representative Stephen S. Wilson of East Boston, one of the speakers.

"FARE PLAY" IS THE CRY OF THESE YOUNG workers for a five-cent "L" fare. Some of the pretty girls who distributed petitions among the crowd at the American's mass meeting on the Common. They obtained hundreds of signatures.

"MILADY'S POWDER PUFF, IF YOU please, and proud of it! Little Zelma Bushner, one of the charming dancers in the dance recital of Amelia Burnham pupils to be given in Jordan Hall on Friday evening.

TENTING TONIGHT ON THE OLD seaboard! Miss Bonnie Lloyd of Boston is stepping out, in fact she's stepping out of her carry-by-hand portable bathing tent at Duxbury Beach.

POPPING ALL OVER THE PLACE TO SELL POPPIES! Miss Geraldine Wyman (on bicycle) and Mildred Sheridan, left at top, and Catherine Wallace, a trio of the busy workers in the interest of the Veterans of Foreign Wars' Poppy Drive. The big days come Friday and Saturday when hundreds of girls will sell flowers.

IT WOULD BE EASY TO LAUGH UP YOUR SLEEVE with this smart little blouse! Obviously displaying Balkan influence, this old and fashionable blouse is just the thing for Milady who likes something different. The white linen model is elaborately embroidered in bright red. Lace is generously used as trimming. (Underwood.)

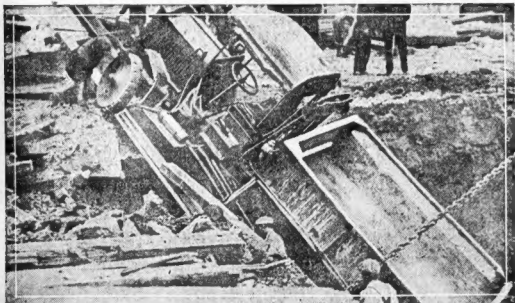

GOV. COX SIGNING THE bill which places the names of disabled war veterans at the top of the Civil Service lists, giving them a preference over veterans and non-veterans. Legion officials and veterans witnessed signing.

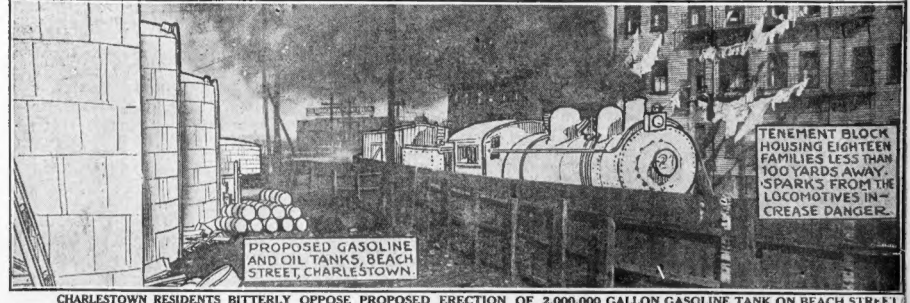

FLORENCE HICKMAN, chairman in charge of the May party to be held by St. Cecilia's church, Catholic Daughters of America, at Medford. Whist and dancing are among the features.

YOU'D LIKE TO PICK UP A BAG OF GOLD, OF course! But do you know why your taxes are high? If you watched them and took steps to lower them, it would be gold in your pocket! This house, with comparative taxes shown, is owned by Michael Tierney at No. 158 Bow street, Everett.

MOTOR TRUCK DOES A TAIL SPIN INTO EXCAVATION FOR NEW BUILDING! Driver backed too far and the truck plunged into the foundation hole being excavated at Franklin and Crossfield streets. A heavy chain was used around the truck and it was hoisted out by a derrick.

CHARLESTOWN RESIDENTS BITTERLY OPPOSE PROPOSED ERECTION OF 2,000,000 GALLON GASOLINE TANK ON BEACH STREET. The permit for the erection of the tank on the site of the Charlestown Storage Warehouse Company is now in the hands of the Mayor. He is expected to take action on it at once. Occupants of a tenement block less than 100 yards from the proposed site, 18 families in all, charge that the scheme is worse than placing dynamite at their back door. Railroad tracks on the Boston & Maine separates the tank, as planned, from the big block. Sparks from locomotives is another hazard, they claim. The photo-diagram shows in detail the relative position of the proposed tank and the surroundings. The City Council has disapproved of the permit.

MOVIE WORLD A LOVE SCENE FROM "GOOD PROVIDER"

NEWS AND COMMENT

by FRIDA DAVIS.

"THE GOOD PROVIDER"
Directed by Victor Sjöström
Settings by Joseph Urban
Julius Ginswanger
"Mother" Glinwanger
Pearl, aged six, Miriam Bittola
Pearl, aged twenty
Victoria Osborne
Toldre Willie Collier, Jr.

THE Cosmopolitan Production, "The Good Provider," at the Park Theatre has no highly dramatic moments, no thrills, no misty closeups of a lovely ingenu, but it has heart interest in abundance as well as honesty.

It is a story of the struggle between two generations. The family lives "forty-five minutes from Broadway," and the children want to move into New York. With their mother's help they persuade the father that the forty-five minute ride is too much for the children to go up to the theatre but it makes a nice ride for father to go back and forth to the small town to business, and they move up to the future where they bankrupt father before he is aware.

The film boasts of uncommonly good acting, attractive settings, and remarkable never subtle. It is well worth seeing. Victor Sjöström does her usual good work as the mother, but the sympathy is all with the father. There is, however, carries the role excellently. Willie Collier Jr., as the son, and Victoria Osborne, and Miriam Bittola as the daughter, are central. The direction is by no means an artist that Victor Sjöström requires no comment.

"THE BACHELOR DADDY"
Presented—Six Parts
Directed by Alfred Green
Scenario by Olga Printzlau
Richard Lester Thomas Whelan

Bliss McVay Maud Wayne
Ada Parfitt Charles Huxley
Laurance Wheat
Toulson Bruce Gorin
David Debbie Twiss

AT THE State Theatre "The Bachelor Daddy" is the leading attraction. Here is genuine comedy at its bluest. The directors have long realized the comedy value of children in a film. Mr. Laury has seen fit to give five children full swing over an empty room and his, no Ring Lardner would say, "the box office for a fool." Jackie Condon should be quite put out when he sees the success achieved by the little Brat Twins, his own age and little Bruce Querin, several years younger.

Richard Lester, played by Thomas Whelan, goes West to care for his mining interests and returns to New York with five vicious children to bring up. The result is one of the best comedies seen in the screen in some time. One wonders how parents ever reach the age of forty. Whelan scores as the bachelor daddy though his five children quite outshine him. Leatrice Joy gives an excellent but all too short performance as the "right woman" while Maud Wayne is acceptable in an unattractive role. But it is to "the game" that all the glory goes. They are superb.

IBSEN WAS, plainly, never meant to be filmed. It is difficult to think of any realistic drama successfully adapted to the screen, but since it was done, let us be glad that Nana was the one to do it. Nora Helmer is one of her best roles on the speaking stage.

The picture follows the original quite closely. There is no "happy ending" with the husband and wife falling into "another's arms." Nora explains that "only the miracle of miracles can reunite them," and one is fully prepared to find the accurate performance that miracle, but in the end, Nora goes out into the snowstorm.

PEAK LOCK OVERDUE AT TENWAY

By NICK FLATLEY
Haskell time are likely to be looking over the New York Yankees carefully, if Peabody Peabody isn't trotted to the hill some of these days at Fenway Park. The slim soupbaw hasn't been in the game for a week ago last Saturday, and he has the habit of appearing frequently the boys in the stands are beginning to page him to the mound.

Strong in Big Market; Opening Firm; Call Money 4 Per Cent.

By B. C. Forbes

When schoolboys are discovered to have done something they should not have done, their favorite device is, "Johnny and Freddy and Andy did it too."

Judge Clay's net excuse for contributing to work men twelve hours a day has been, "Other companies do it."

He has sometimes added that it was willing to let it go if other steel companies would do the same. Other companies "pass the buck" exactly the same way.

So the twelve-hour day has been allowed to go on to this day.

This excuse is not likely to hold water much longer. The head of the nation, upon calling all the big steel men together last week, asked them to do away entirely with the twelve-hour day, and their assured claim they strongly favored the idea. They apparently added a word of caution that it would not be practical for all the large companies to follow suit.

It would not be difficult to induce any refractory company to fall into line.

As last resort, by publicity.

If President Harding did not tell the steel men that failure to take voluntary action would set the machinery in motion to compel action, he should have done so.

Liberty! What crimes are committed, what evils are perpetrated, under the cloak of liberty?

This suggestion for the liberty of cooperation to work men twelve hours a day should be abandoned without further delay. Liberty is a cloak to permit the oppressor to oppress the oppressed.

Liberty! Laws are made to compel people to do certain things, to forbid them to do certain things.

Isn't it against the law to sell habit-forming drugs?

Isn't it against the law to take things which belong to another?

Isn't it against the law to drive an automobile beyond a certain speed?

Isn't it against the law to let a child grow from adolescence?

Isn't it against the law to add twelve hours to the day?

Isn't it against the law to add water to milk offered for sale?

Isn't it against the law to be cruel to horses?

To work men twelve hours a day for just as long as any of these things.

A great many people would like to have the liberty to buy and drink beer, but the law of the land forbids it.

Judge Clay has said and repeated for years that if the Steel Corporation didn't "permit" men to work twelve hours in certain departments, the men would shut out other plants.

The bootlegger exercises his wrongdoing fully by saying that he doesn't supply the demand for liquor, somebody else would.

The same law would be used to be given for working men seven days a week, but when the Steel Corporation finally saw fit to give the seven-day week, it somehow managed to continue to operate other steel companies have been influenced by the example thus set.

There isn't the slightest doubt that the Steel Corporation would be able to maintain its position if it were to abolish the twelve-hour day tomorrow. And it is morally certain that other companies would follow suit.

A thing is either right or wrong. If it is wrong, it should be stopped, and it is morally certain that it is wrong if it is humanly possible to stop the twelve-hour day in steel plants.

Who can attempt to defend the twelve-hour day?

Here is the pit of the whole matter expressed in one sentence, the soundness and truthfulness of which no steel manufacturer can dispute.

American standards of living cannot be established on a basis of a twelve-hour day, and this democracy cannot prosper under the standards of living maintained by the immigrant classes who choose or submit to the twelve-hour day.

President Roosevelt was once being shown over one of the giant steel plants in Pittsburgh. He was asked to be taken through the mine where the lowest paid workers were found the living conditions there. At a gathering which followed, Mr. Roosevelt turned to the business leaders of Pittsburgh that stood in America would be better off or could be safe until every spot was filled with immigrants to direct their attention to raising the living standards among those whose living standards were lowest.

High living standards and the twelve-hour day cannot be maintained. It would be just as logical to expect the liquid to be breathable.

All of the excuses and explanations and counter-explanations which could be trotted out between now and Sunday couldn't justify the twelve-hour day in steel plants.

Wrong is wrong. The twelve-hour day is wrong.

Not Ready for Russian Hymn

"The Marseillaise" Is All Right
Copyright, 1922, Star Company

Mr. Hillman, head of the Garment Makers' Union, wants all unions to unite in one BIG union. He says, "The enemy on its side (meaning capital) is united to fight labor, and labor must unite to fight back."

To stir up enthusiasm, the band played "The Marseillaise" and "A Hymn of Free Russia." "The Marseillaise" is all right; it has been seasoned by time. The Free Russia hymn has not yet been digested by the public mind.

The unions on one side, united to fight capital on the other, is a picture more in keeping with the Russian idea than the American idea just now. It might surprise Mr. Hillman to know that out of a hundred millions of Americans, more than ninety-eight millions would NOT agree with him. The Russian government before the revolution was such as made a desperate and constant fight between workers and the Czar necessary, just as the French Revolution was necessary to produce a change.

It is otherwise here. Mr. Hillman and his friends must not forget the ballot box. It isn't always used intelligently by the workers, but that isn't the fault of the ballot box.

It is there to be used when human beings get ready to use it, and learn how to use it.

It did not exist in France or in Russia before the revolution. But it does exist here. That ought to make revolution unnecessary.

It will certainly, for a long time to come, make extremely uncomfortable anybody that seriously SUGGESTS revolution.

Mr. Hillman's suggestion of a big union to fight capital may be useful, however, to remind certain capitalists that they have been foolish, and warn them. The warning is not serious yet. It might become serious later.

There is no doubt that a systematic effort has been made to weaken, undermine and destroy labor unions. The unions are necessary to the nation's prosperity. They are based on justice and necessity. They mean not only greater comfort, decent living for workers, but greater prosperity for the very prosperous man—since prosperity is limited to the amount that the workers are able to spend.

No man can get what others do not spend. The more the crowd can spend the more the few can GET. If you doubt it, go to China and try to make millions.

Poor Old Pirates

They Were Amateurs. Other Things
Copyright, 1922, Star Company

Conan Doyle shows you the spirit of Katie King. This spirit, it seems, comes and tells children stories about pirates and sunken treasure and scuttled ships. He says Katie King, who lived in the days of Charles the Second, was really named Anne Morgan. She was the daughter of Morgan, the pirate. You might think that Conan Doyle was joking, but he is not. He is perfectly solemn about it. You say to yourself those old pirates, hung to the yardarm, could learn something from their prosperous brothers of today.

The Rev. Dr. Straton of New York, who denounces things vigorously, finds respectable ladies and gentlemen, including the former clergymen of the church, drifting from his congregation. He says he will continue to denounce and will not "throw cologne water upon the putrid fignities of a rebellious race."

Truth and vigor will prevail in the long run, but the run may BE LONG. There are plenty to sprinkle the cologne water, plenty to explain that a camel could easily go through the eye of a needle if the camel were small enough and the needle big enough. Not so many to tell cold, unpleasant truth.

In connection with the much discussed "crime wave" there is a tragedy of which you have little. In the last six months 86 per cent of crime in the United States was committed by FIRST offenders. That shows that something is working successfully as a criminal producer—whether it be the education of the war, or of profligacy, the memory of vanished silk shirts and twelve-dollar shoes, or whatever.

Two Great Republics

And Some Foolish Investors
Copyright, 1922, Star Company

Future historians will write about the United States and our attitude toward Russia with interest. In France, one great republic, millions of peasants and little working people lent their money to Russia. The French government refuses to recognize Russia until that debt is paid.

In other words, the Republic of France demands justice for the LITTLE people that lent their savings.

In the United States no little people, in any number, bought Russian bonds. But a few very important RICH people bought Russian bonds. This government has a great deal of sympathy for important rich people—it should have when they deserve it, of course—and this government demands that Russia reform itself. In other words, that it pay a few rich investors before it can be recognized.

If the Russian bonds in France had been bought only by a few enormously rich investors, the French Republic would not bother about it.

Just what this country would have done if the Russian securities had been bought by a few millions of little nobodies, let the average reader decide for himself.

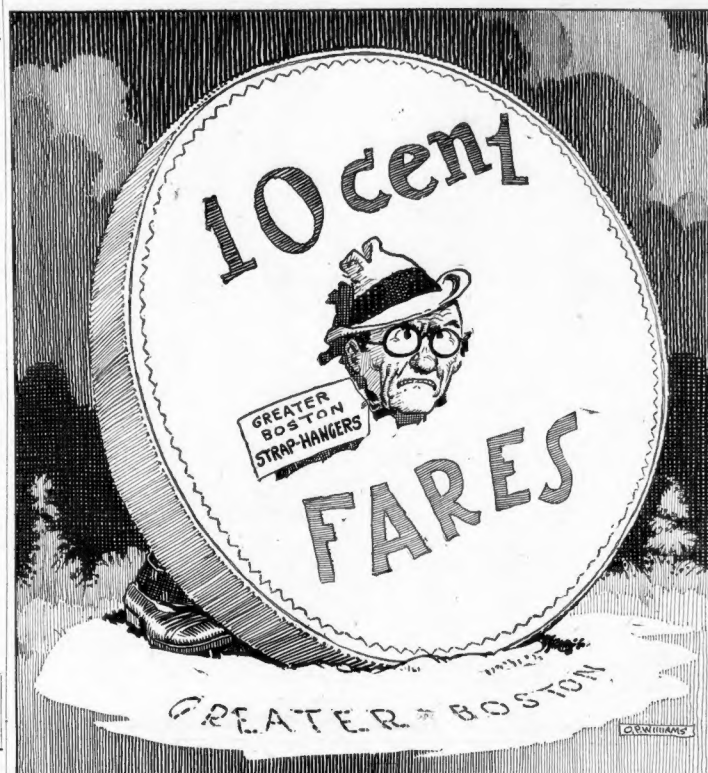

The fact is that Russia, a great country desperately struggling to survive and establish itself, in opposed, checked and thwarted by two great republics, both struggling to get back money stupidly lent to a Czar and his brutal government.

It is not creditable to either republic, but of the two France makes the best showing.

Somebody's Birthday

(Copyright, 1922, by Bill Strydom, Inc.)

YOU should find abundant opportunity for success if this is your birthday, for you have the character of the nervous, energetic type of success, who rushes in where angels fear to tread, not because he has given prolonged meditation to the merits of the question, but because he believes in action at all costs.

You will not always succeed, however, but you will create so many more changes for achievement every year than the average person has in a lifetime that a small percentage of realization of your numerous hopes would be more than usual accomplishment.

Journeys undertaken today will undoubtedly be successful, materially and physically, for the traveler.

Your ensuing year will be one of misadventure and failure—achievement in your outward life and benevolence in your private life. You may avert calamity by cautious care of your intimate associates.

A child born today will be inclined to disease of a digestive type through its early life, but robust in full youth. It should be carefully nurtured against the use of too rich medicine.

Famous persons born today:

Martin J. Spalding—American Catholic archbishop and author.

William O. Perkins—Comptroller in Civil War.

Madison B. Heyburn—Senator.

LOOK ON THIS PICTURE AND ON THIS

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

LOOK on this picture and then upon this, as Hamlet might put it.

If you want to see, at a glance, the difference between the Elizabethan Era, which was the Golden Age of English literature, and our own post-practical age, culturally considered, please read the two following characterizations of Man:

Says Shakespeare: "What a piece of work is a man! How infinite in faculty; in form and moving, in action how like an angel! In apprehension how like a God!"

And now read a chemical analysis, the product of this practical period. Scientific investigation shows that the ingredients of a man, plus water, are as follows:

Pat enough for seven bars of soap. Iron enough for a medium-sized nail. Sugar enough to fill a shaker. Lime enough to whitewash a chicken coop. Phosphorus enough to tip 2,200 matches. Magnesium enough for a medicinal dose. Potassium enough to explode a toy cannon. Sulphur enough to rid a dog of fleas.

Modern Touch

And—add the chemical analysis, with the truly modern touch which measures values in money's worth—this whole collection of chemicals can be bought for 98 cents, and that in a day when things are three times as high as they used to be.

But even this ultra-modern is not without sentiment, nor is barren of philosophic insight, for he sums his summary with the respectful exclamation: "How wonderful then is the brain which makes many men prelates!"

You will remember that the peasant answers his own cynical query about man who is but dust, and yet, "Thou has crowned him with glory and honor, given him dominion over the works of Thy hands, and has indeed made him but little less than God."

Everything, it appears, depends not so much upon the point of view as upon the habit and mode of expression.

No one could fairly claim, and make out his case, that the days of David, the Judean peasant, or of Shakespeare, the Elizabethan dramatist, thought more highly of human beings than we do in this age.

More Idealistic

Simply, we love to seem cynical and without sentiment, much as do sophomores at college and high school lassies who mean never to marry.

We assume a certain roughness of spirit and brusqueness of speech as a very protection for the deep tenderness and idealism which would otherwise be denied.

Somewhat in the fashion of Mother Nature, which habitually sheathes her seeds in rough husk and herd shell.

As a matter of fact, with all our crude materiality of outward seeming, we are today more idealistic regarding man and more reverent in essential religiousness than ever the race has been.

Despite the madness of the maddest way that man has sought in all recorded time, despite the most difficult mess in which humanity has ever emmeshed itself, one may justly claim that not in all history have we thought so highly of the human stuff as now, nor have we ever come so close to the perfect demand that we love one another.

Oh, No! The millennium is not at hand nor is the Kingdom of Heaven near.

But this diagnosis, with all respect to both the Shakespearean rhapsody and the modernist's chemical analysis, means to sing in the words of dramatic dogmatism, the song of Faith in Man.

Daylight Saving

Great Benefit

Editor Boston American: I think it is a great benefit to the working people to have the extra hour of daylight. It gives one an opportunity to do extra work for themselves after hours.

Chelsea. M. A. READING.

Strongly Opposed

Editor Boston American: Indeed, I am one of those strongly opposed to daylight saving. It is ridiculous, and would stand a ghost of a chance to become law if left to the votes of the people. A BUSINESS MAN, Southbridge.

Mother Approves

Editor Boston American: We think the daylight saving a progressive step. I am a mother of five children, and as the day draws to a close the extra hour of daylight affords an opportunity to unite with husband and enjoy an hour's recreation in the open, which would otherwise be denied.

Extra Hour Valued

Editor Boston American: As we are more and more busy to work and are almost all day from home, the extra hour of daylight seems to be increased a thousand fold in value to us. With hopes of many seasons of the same daylight saving. HERBERT PARKER, Brookline, Mass.

SEEN AND HEARD

By Lambert and Dalry

A TORN-UP GENERAL

ALLEN has received a motor traveling bag, a birthday gift from Portsmouth (N. H.) Lodge of Elks, for whom he delivered the memorial address at their annual Lodge of Sorrow. Allen has just turned fifty.

Eight people, two of them children, have recently been run down by autos in REPRESENTATIVE JOHN MITCHELL'S Springfield district. All eight went to court, won verdicts and did not get a penny. That accounts for the bill now going through the House which would require every autist to carry at least $5,000 liability insurance.

MAYOR CURLEY has been presented with a copper card of the profile of ABRAHAM LINCOLN. This was the gift of the boys of the Mother, Preserved School in Dorchester. The boys of the district class worked for weeks perfecting the card, which is mounted on a shield. It was presented by JOSEPH H. TRA-CHEIR. The Mayor was greatly pleased with the gift.

Another gift to the Mayor was that of a unique autist, which is really a box. It was given to him by a painter at one of the city institutions. It is wonderfully funny. The top of the box just below the lettering is a beautiful spray of forget-me-nots, like-like in expression.

ASSISTANT DISTRICT ATTORNEY PETER F. MCCARTHY says that he is not going to resign chairman of the Ward 19 Democratic Committee even if ATTORNEY PETER J. DONOGHUE, candidate for district attorney, thinks the other way.

about it. Peter says that he is a lawyer and he would like to have Mr. Donoghue point out anything in the statute books which compels him to do so.

The promotion of JOHN J. GATELY of the auditor's office to be acting city auditor during the absence of CITY AUDITOR RUPERT S. CARVEN is an annual reward for efficient service to the city during the past thirty-six years.

JOSEPH A. CAHALAN, clerk and investigator in the registry department at City Hall, is a candidate for the office of high senior conductor in the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters. The annual state convention will take place at Pittsfield, Mass., May 23, 24, 25.

One of the most ardent advocates of daylight saving is HEALTH COMMISSIONER FRANCIS X. MAHONEY. His way of looking at it is that it amends the constitutional right to the pursuit of happiness by providing much additional time for workers to enjoy outdoor sports in daylight.

THEODORE A. GLYNN, according to MICHAEL J. WARD, MAYOR CURLEY'S secretary, says that the name "Theodore" comes from a girl from above. Michael also says that he took the trouble to go to the Public Library and after several hours' hard labor he found that "Theodore" means "something like the above didn't need nor want."

PATRICK J. (PARKER) O'REARDON, the Beau Brummell of the health department, has donned his straw roof and shepherd's staff to keep in touch with the Curley "Grays." Leave it to "Parker" to set the pace.

GARRETT P. SERVISS FAMINE PROPHECY

By Garrett P. Serviss

ONCE in a while some English savant seems to be seized with a fit of pessimism and while it is running its course he seeks to cast off the gloom from his mind by blowing a cloud of it over the world at large. An example has just turned up, and the black cloud is like a smoke cap over Venetia, is perceived to issue from the mouth, or the pen, or the typewriter of Sir WILLIAM BEVERIDGE, who had a namesake and perhaps ancestor in the sixteenth century celebrated for his efforts to propagate the gospel among the Indians.

It seems that the present Sir William has been using the "periodogram" method, or the variation of wheat prices in Europe, and by diligent application of statistical analysis has reached some conclusions that appear to have upset him to the extra hour of daylight. It gives one an opportunity to do extra work for themselves after hours.

"I used to think I could be perfectly happy," she said, "if my husband had a million."

"Wouldn't you be satisfied with that much now?" her friend asked.

"Indeed, no. Nearly every man in our neighborhood was a war profiteer."

Sir William, as he himself admits in the tail of the sentence, had no confidence in the results of his analysis, why did he shape the head of the sentence into a suggestion calculated to call up in the mind of the startled reader dreadful memories of the most fearful scenes of human history? Are the statistics of the last few years in condition well suited to be played upon with "shockers"?

When we come to look at specimens of the "proofs" that Sir William Beveridge is reported to have presented in support of his famine prophecy the thing appears almost farcical. Read this:

Has Very Farical Sound

The prediction is based on the variation in wheat prices in Europe during the last 300 years." Sir William, using the periodogram method of computation, finds that the maximum number of years between famines at intervals of about 15-18 years. This abnormality, he states, is due to the fact that four weather cycles (tempests) operating all together, one in four years, corresponds to one that has been identified in sun spots. Another of 6.11 years has been found in temperature and rainfall records. Two others that are identified, those of 2.74 and 3.71 years, have been identified in meteorological or astronomical data.

In the last half of the nineteenth century similar statistical studies were made in support of a theory about the relationship of sun spots to famines in India, but all that, with the progress of time, fell in to the discard. In fact, such statistics can be made to prove anything that is put into them, like Baconian ciphers.

In fact, also, famines are related to certain lands and to certain states and forms of human organization and civilization. There have never been worldwide famines since the world became a planetwide world.

These parts of Europe that are decimated by the frequent famines of the Middle Ages have been free from them during later centuries. Russia alone suffering from the famine of 1891-2, and the famine of 1901-2, and the famine of 1902-3, and the famine of 1903-4, and the famine of 1904-5, and the famine of 1905-6, and the famine of
